New Store.

Two of Lancaster's most popular and enterprising young men, Messrs. James W. Smith and Fisher Herring, have rented the store room vacated by S. A. Walker, the groceryman, and will about the 10th of next month, open a shoe and gent's furnishing goods establishment. The room is being remodeled and will be made handsome and convenient in every way. These young men have many friends, and The Record predicts great success for them.

To Subscribers.

Owing to the crowded condition of our advertising columns, quite a lot of reading matter had to be omitted from this issue of The Record. Among this was the editorial, farm items, and a write-up of Washington City. The merchants are catching on to the idea that if they want business, they must seek it through the columns of a news paper, as that is where customers look for the names of reliable, substantial merchants.

YOU MUST

Call and settle your 1906 School tax. Please do this and save other expense. E. W. Harris, Treas.

From laughter to tears and return, arousing the better emotions of your soul, Plouffe-Shepherd Co's Program Court House to night.

Fire in County.

On Friday morning, the large barn of Jim Wilnot, near town, was destroyed by fire, including a survey, milk cow, 100 barrels of corn and a lot of hay. Dr. Burnett lost a fine horse worth $200, which Mr. Wilnot was wintering for him.

Speaking.

Mr. M. F. Sharp will address the farmers of Garrard county at the court house on Feb. 25, court day, and at Bryantsville Tuesday 26, with a view to organize and realize better prices for tobacco. He will speak at other places in the county, and every farmer should hear him.

Tobacco Growers.

There will be a meeting of the tobacco growers and the American Society of Equity, at the court house in Lancaster, on Monday, Feb. 25, at one o'clock, at which time M. F. Sharp, a prominent speaker, will explain clearly the workings of the society, and what has been done in regard to the pooling of tobacco. He will also speak at one o'clock, p. m., at the following places: Bryantsville, Tuesday, 26; Buckeye Wednesday 27th; McCrory, Thursday 28th; Paint Lick, Friday, March 1st. Every farmer is urged to be present.

Men of Right Spirit.

Mr. J. T. Conn, of Ada, Indian Territory, has sent us a check for five dollars, to be credited on his subscription to The Record. This pays ahead for a greater time than anyone on our list has ever done, and shows that he appreciates the humble efforts we are putting forth to give the people of Garrard county a good paper. Mr. Conn resided here until a few years ago, when he left to seek his fortune in the West. He has been very successful, and his legion of friends here rejoice in his good luck. A man like that will succeed anywhere.

Child Burns To Death.

Saturday morning, while breakfast was being prepared at the home of Squire Ike N. Myers, near town, Julia Rice, the little daughter of Mrs. Halile Myers Ware ran into a front room, and stepping before the open fire, her dress was ignited and the child fatally burned before assistance reached her. She lived until Sunday afternoon, when death relieved the intense suffering. Mrs. Ware is the youngest daughter of Squire Myers, and spent most of her life at the Garrard county home of the late Andrew J. Rice. The child was almost three years old. Mrs. Myers has a wide acquaintance in Garrard, and the many friends of the family extend deepest sympathy on the great bereavement. Drs. Acton and Kinaird waited upon the child.

What Would Happen?

If someday a newspaper man should print the contents of his waste basket there would probably be a riot, says an exchange. There would certainly be trouble in many homes, arrests in some directions, shot guns in others, trouble all around. But the patron of a newspaper never sees the waste basket. He only glances at the printed pages—complaining if one letter in fifty is upside down, grows his dis appointment if one name in five hundred happens to be spelled wrong frowns because the editor didn't take his advice about publicly warning his neighbor about keeping snow off the sidewalk, and is generally disgruntled not so much at what he finds as at what he fails to find. He knows his share of the waste basket, but if he could have one look at the contributions made to that receptacle by his neighbors and friends, he would thank God for the existence of a man with sufficient intelligence and courage not to print all he knows and to temper even that he does print.

The Richmond Business College Students are making good records. Prof. Lippard is searching for more good Students. He has calls for four Stenographers now at $60 per month and two at $100, per month. Nothing pays like a business education. Write or particulars. J. H. Lippard.

To The Public.

It is with pleasure that I accept $1,300 for my damage to merchandise sustained by me and I take this opportunity to recommend Elmore, Wearen and Thomas and their companies to the insuring public for prompt and liberal settlement, courtious treatment in adjusting the above. S. A. Walker.

MILTON ELLIOTT.

The writer was surprised, and great ly shocked, to receive on the 5th instant a phone message from Dr. W. M. Elliott at Bryantsville, that his father Prof. Milton Elliott had just died at North Middletown. Prof. Elliott was born in Estill county and was nearing his seventieth year at the date of his death. His parentage was of good Christian and intelligent people and, on one side, of Revolutionary stock. He was educated in the common schools of his native county, and afterwards attended the school of Prof. F. G. Gaylord, a distinguished educator of New York, who taught a high school at Irvine, the county seat of Estill. Prof. Gaylord established a High School in Platt City, Mo., and so pleased was he with Prof. Elliott's attainments and aptitude for teaching that he asked him to go to Missouri and assist in the Platt City School. After teaching there a while he returned to Kentucky in 1850; and in 1861, having taught in the meantime, he entered the Federal Army in which he held a good position. His health failed him owing to exposure of camp and march. But still he hesitated to leave the service until it was practically suicide to remain. Just after the close of the war he was married to Miss Joan Phillips, of Monticello, Ky. Soon after his marriage he was placed in charge of the Kendrick Institute for Boys and Girls, at Monticello. The school building was destroyed by fire in July 1870, and Prof. Elliott then studied for the ministry and became a minister of the Christian church.

His health failing, he went back to his native county and while recruiting his health, taught and preached for two years. In August 1874 he founded at Kirksville, Madison county, the Elliott Institute, in which he taught for about twenty years, and it is said that he preached every Sunday during that time. In June 1893, he became President of the Garrard College, Lancaster, Ky., in which he taught two years. He was then offered and accepted the Presidency of West Kentucky College at Mayfield, Ky. Several years ago he removed to North Middletown in Bourbon county, Kentucky, and since that time, has been teaching a highly successful school at this place. Prof. Elliott was eminently successful as an educator. He was conscientious and painstaking in a high degree, his natural aptitude for the work being aided by broad culture and ripe experience. His conduct as a teacher has given great satisfaction to the patrons of each school he has taught. He was a fine disciplinarian, and it is understood that no boy ever broke the rules of school more than once with impunity. He would not receive a boy in his school who was unmanageable at home. He was a Mason and an ardent Prohibitionist. He has nine children, all of those who have reached maturity being prominent and useful in their chosen professions, and in society.

Having known Prof. Elliott from my early boyhood, and having attended one of his schools, and after a long unbroken intimacy and friendship the writer offers his tribute to his memory. He was a true man in every relation of life, and will be missed by many—even beyond his family and his circle of acquaintances.

Should a transcontinental traveler at a certain point on the Northern Pacific railroad be awakened at sunrise and look from window of the Pullman, his eyes would open in wonder at the view before him. This point is in the heart of the Rockies where the snow remains till late in the summer and sometimes lies the year round.

Of the myriads of flakes that fall in November, perchance two may fall side by side and nestle close to each other till the warm sun of July converts them into drops of water. One trickles down the eastern slope. It meets others and in company with them forms a little brook which jumps from rock to rock. Several other such brooks join and form a madly rushing mountain stream. After rushing its way to the foot of the mountains, it begins its more sinuous and dignified journey across rolling hills and prairie lands till it reaches the Father of Waters. Then it winds its way to the Gulf. The other drop begins its shorter journey westward and likewise finds its resting place in the mighty Pacific. This point is on the Continental Divide.

If the traveller should glance to the south, the west, and then to the north, he would doubtless be reminded of Dr Johnson's Happy Valley. The tropical verdure would not be there, otherwise it would be a striking resemblance. Below lay an expansive valley with undulations here and there. Southward, some thirty miles distant, rise up the stately, snow-crowned mountains known as the High lands.

To the west across the valley, is another range of mountains with a few scattered white capped peaks. To the north is a different scene. A bold barren butte stands like a sentinel. Spreading out from its base and up another mountain side to the north is the city which bears its name. In the upper part of the city, are numerous smoke stacks emitting huge volumes of smoke. Further on are hundreds of little mounds looking like ant hills, indicating that the pick of the prospector has been busy. At the foot of the hill the city dwindles away, out into the valley called the 'flats'. On the 'flats' is a colossal shaft, the tallest concrete shaft in the world, reaching to a height of 351 feet.

The mountains are awe-inspiring in their grandness. The view is wonderful in its extent. But more awe-inspiring and more wonderful is that which the busy city represents—the ambitions, the struggles, the failures, and the successes of men.

In the early sixties, a traveller on horseback passed near the foot of the aforementioned butte now called Big Butte. A lone prospector, tired of placer mining, offered the horseman his six claims for five hundred dollars. The traveller had the exact amount in his belt but refused to make the bargain. In the lifetime of that same traveller those six claims have produced more than a billion dollars. In '64 two prospectors discovered rich placers and other men of the same type quickly rushed in. The citizens of the primitive camp, Butte, were lawless as a matter of fact. No one was safe with out his revolver at his belt and his knife ready for instant use. Ten years later, copper was discovered in paying quantities. As a consequence, there was a great influx of fortune seekers. Like all mining towns it had its ebb and flow. But copper was found to be abundant and the city grew rapidly. From a camp of two prospectors forty years ago it has expanded into a city having all modern conveniences and a population of 75,000.

As a mining town, Butte is second to none. The hill on which it is situated is said to be the richest in the world. This is easily believed when one reflects that it produces $60,000,000 of copper annually or one fourth of the output of the whole world. In addition to this it gives up every year $15,000,000 in gold and silver. Butte and its environs contains 6,300 mining claims. Its pay rolls $1,500,000 monthly. The development of so many mines has given rise to a great deal of litigation. The fumes from the smoke stacks of the smelters destroyed every trace of vegetation. From this cause ensued the Smoke Case, the greatest case of its kind on record. As a consequence only one smelter remains. It is the one belonging to Senator Clark and has a shaft sufficiently high to carry the fumes above the city. Now the ore is transported by rail to Anaconda twenty-seven miles distant where there are immense smelters worth millions of dollars. Patriotic Butte citizens claim that now their city has lawns and trees. It is true. After a diligent search you may find a few dozen lawns having the same area as the parlor floor and probably half a hundred trees a little larger than a stalk of corn. This is sufficient to allow the truth of statement that Butte is no longer barren. In fact there are two Buttes, one above ground and the other below. Underneath the catacombs, one can walk under nearly all of the city. Here 10,000 men work day and night, Sunday not excepted, at $3.50 per shift of eight hours each. This subterranean city is by no means a small one. It comprises 800 miles of tunnels and uses up 55,000,000 feet of timber annually. The greatest depth yet reached is 2,400 feet. Many accidents occur and many lives are lost in this city of caverns, yet the work continues ceaselessly.

Unions entirely control the town. Nearly every quarter of the globe have followed to elect officers has formed a union. The cost of living is high but so are the wages. Only a few weeks ago the barbers raised the price of a haircut to fifty cents and a shave to twenty-five. With the least cause each union raises the wages for its members. A terrible clash is predicted by some. It is difficult to foresee the result.

Butte is cosmopolitan. People from nearly every quarter of the globe have congregated here in quest of fortune. It is interesting to observe what may be noted on the streets. At the end of a shift you may see numbers of home ward bound miners with the never failing tin bucket on their arms. Among them is the Canadian, Englishman, Scotchman, Irishman, Scandinavian, Russian, Austrian, Dago, Asiatic, and others of many climes. You may see the Chinaman in his laundry wagon. Now and then a cow-boy gallops by on his pony. Rarely a son of Ham passes by and less rarely the high cheeked native American. At night the peculiarly accented Hot Tam-loses of the Syrian rings forth from the street corners. Heavily loaded wagons are driven down hill at break-neck speed. Scarcely a day passes without a runaway. In winter the streets are filled with children on skates and those too young to skate are pushed in

In your correspondent's letter of two weeks ago, in speaking of the conditions of the dirt roads (and the Lord knows they are no better now) I stated, or intended to, that it was over 3 miles from the Lincoln county line to Hammock Post Office, and you pointed out 8. Also I said there was no overseer and you published there was, an overseer. Please correct those mistakes.

The mother who has acquired the habit of keeping on hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, saves herself a great amount of uneasiness and anxiety. Coughs, colds and croup, to which children are susceptible are quickly cured by its use.
